

History & Political Science

Objectives

- To emphasize rigorous analysis of political structures, historical changes and continuities, and human relationships;
- To train students in the craft of communicating their ideas orally and in writing with precision and formal organization;
- To help students attain career-enhancing experiences outside the classroom;
- To equip students for immediate entry into either graduate/law school or a chosen career.

Tradition of Excellence

The graduates of the Department of History and Political Science have become distinguished leaders in academia, law, government service, business, Christian ministry, and many other vocations. The Department's faculty has created three majors and a minor that offer a blend of traditional and contemporary courses. Teaching methods include lectures, seminars (sometimes held in professors' homes), internships, teleconferences, computer simulations, and travel and study throughout the world. Students are diligent in class attendance, write papers that are presented at academic conferences, participate in honor societies like Phi Alpha Theta, participate in political campaigns, and welcome both scholars and politicians to speak in the beautiful Forum of Colt Hall. Both faculty and students participate in the activities of the Institute of Politics and Public Service and the Margaret Stevenson Center for Women's Studies.

Career Opportunities

Recent graduates have become Fulbright Scholars, served as interns at the Supreme Court and White House, won scholarships at institutions such as Yale University, and entered law schools and graduate programs at Berkeley, Harvard, UCSD, UCLA, and New York University. It is the goal of the Department to help students prepare to make moral decisions within the world community and to transcend their self-interests in the service of God and humanity.
