

Literature, Journalism & Modern Languages

Purposes

---

- To equip students with the skills to develop expository and creative writing;
- To develop interpretive, analytical, and critical skills through the close study and analysis of literary works;
- To develop competency in a foreign language as well as insight into other peoples and cultures;
- To educate students in the history and structure of the English language;
- To broaden students' awareness and appreciation of our cultural heritage by examining masterpieces of western and world civilizations.

Tradition of Excellence

The Department of Literature, Journalism, and Modern Languages invites students to enter into the "republic of letters," to become students of the basic component of human interaction: language. The department is committed to helping students learn how to communicate themselves and their ideas effectively through the analysis and study of the written word as used in a breadth of literature—classical and modern, English and French, British and American Ethnic, etc. The faculty offer different approaches to the subject matter due to their different educational backgrounds. Professors of the department have distinguished themselves by having work published in scholarly journals like French Studies, The Princeton University Library Chronicle, The New York Times, and The Journal of Mass Media Ethics. They have given lectures and submitted papers at such places as The University of London, UCLA, Princeton University, and the American Association of Teachers of Spanish and Portuguese in Madrid, Spain. Department faculty have also received major national grants including several from the National Endowment for the Humanities, the Fulbright Fellowship Grant, and the Del Amo Foundation.

Career Opportunities

Students who have graduated from the Department of Literature, Journalism, and Modern Languages have been accepted into some of the finest graduate schools in the country. In addition to careers in law, education, journalism and public relations, graduates from our department are now active in a variety of business fields, ranging from investment banking to clothing retail management, tour agency management, and personnel management. Internship programs with local newspapers and magazines are also established to create contacts and experience for our students to gain employment in technical writing, business writing, and newspaper reporting.

Journalism

Major with a Minor in Spanish

The Department offers a Journalism major with a Spanish minor. This extremely marketable and desirable combination is recommended for Journalism majors who desire to work in American border cities or in Latin American countries, as well as for students seeking a Single Subject Teaching Credential. The student completes an internship at a bilingual newspaper, magazine, radio, or television station. A maximum of two of the required upper-division literature courses in the Journalism major may be in Spanish or Latin American literature.
